MORE TALK ABOUT HOTELS

Rumor That a New Up-to-Date Building Will Be Erected.

"PENNYROYAL" LOOKING UP

Man With Capital Does Not Fear Investing In Good Locality.

Much is again heard about another hotel. The "Pennyroyal" building has sprung into notice several times of late. After the announcement that the company owning it had offered to sell it to the trustees of the Y. M. C. A., providing the trustees ratified the sale of the old building and wanted to buy and not build, hotel men seem to have awakened to the fact that a fine building was about to be taken off the market.

The Pennyroyal was built for hotel purposes, and though uncompleted the handsome four-story structure is in a condition to be finished up in a few weeks, and will be when it is leased by a responsible party.

There were a couple of hotel men here last week examining the building. Whether they will lease it or not is to be known this week. Should they decide to take it over for a period of years it can be completed regardless of weather conditions before the end of the year.

There is a rumor current that parties are seriously considering a proposition that has been submitted by a man of experience in the hotel business. There is a foundation for this rumor, but just at this time we cannot go into particulars. The financial part of the affair is about already arranged for. The hotel man wants a new building, centrally located and a most eligible site can be secured. The hotel, if built, will be modern in every way. As to interior finish it will be far beyond anything heretofore undertaken and the hotel will be conducted on the European plan. The negotiations now pending may not be brought to a close for several days. The chances for a large new hotel building are promising and may be a certainty in a few days or weeks.

TIRE EXPLODED And Came Near Destroying Sight of Herbert Dorris.

Sunday morning, about 11 o'clock, while Herbert Dorris was pumping air into an auto tire at his garage, at Eleventh and Virginia streets, the tire exploded and the escaping air struck him in the face with such force that he was knocked backward to the ground. Dr. Brown was at once summoned and it was found that Mr. Dorris' sight was endangered. Dr. Brown thinks that with proper care he may be all right in a few days, provided there is no infection from the sand and dirt that was imbedded in the ball of both eyes. The tire had a sand blister on it, which caused the explosion. The noise sounded like a cannon.

CHILLICOTHE LOSES OUT

Spoke Too Soon About Playing With The Kitty Winners.

THE GAMES ARE CALLED OFF

Charleston, W. Va., Beats Chillicothe and forfeits $500.

With Charleston, W. Va., the home of the winning team, the sixth championship season of the Ohio State league came to a close Sunday. Charleston won twice from Maysville and attained a percentage of .632. Chillicothe, Ohio, holder of the leadership until Sunday lost the pennant by failing to break even in a double-header with Portsmouth, Ohio, and finished second. A post season series that was to be played with Paducah of the Kitty league is now off. Charleston's team has decided to pay the league forfeit of $500 to Paducah rather than hold the team together and travel so far to play.

ACCOMPLISHED PIANIST Accepts Position With Clarksville's New Theatre.

Miss Marguerite Lawson, the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lawson, has accepted the position of pianist at the Lillian Theatre at Clarksville and went there yesterday.

Miss Lawson is well known here as a musician. Thousands and thousands have heard her piano playing during the engagements she has filled at the Princess Theatre since Mr. Bleich first opened up that magnificent place of entertainment. She is a general favorite with local moving picture house habitués as well as socially. She is a pretty, bright-eyed young lady and never fails to make friends of everybody she meets.

She has a music library of over 600 pieces, including operatic selections, old-time melodies, rag-time favorites and orchestral arrangements.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

Met Yesterday For 5 Days Session At The Avalon.

CITY IS FULL OF TEACHERS

Are Here From Every Section of The County--Miss West In Charge.

Teachers from all parts of the county began coming in early yesterday morning to attend the annual meeting of the county teachers. Some of them had to travel from 14 to 16 miles and were a little late in registering. The number present at noon yesterday was

The Institute is under the management of Miss Jennie West, County Superintendent of Schools. The law requires every teacher in the county to attend and the penalty for non-attendance is revocation of license.

Owing to the use of the Circuit Court room by Judge Hanbery the sessions of the Institute are being held at The Avalon. But the change of place is in many ways advantageous. The Avalon is as clean as a new pin and two blocks off from the main thoroughfare as well as being free from the noise and other annoyances peculiar to Main street. Mr. Metcalfe, with his accustomed generosity, offered The Avalon to Miss West for the five days of the Institute, free of cost. Mr. Metcalfe's auditorium is an ideal one for such gatherings and he is gratified to see that the people are beginning to realize that he built it for the people.

BIG CROWD Attracted By Circuit Court and Teachers' Institute.

The city was full of people yesterday from every section. It was a big gathering of whites and blacks and the streets were packed during almost the entire day.

It was the first day of the six weeks term of Circuit Court. All the grand and petit jurors summoned for the term had to come to town, whether they wanted to or not. Of course the influx of nearly a hundred teachers from all points helped to swell the crowd. The colored people were from all over Christian county to take part in the celebration of Emancipation Day. The business men were kept continually on the go and their sales were probably larger than any day since last Christmas eve. With all the push and jam it is gratifying to note that the best of order prevailed, and though the police pulled a few violators of the city's laws, the charges set opposite their names on the slate at police headquarters were all for minor offenses.

There will also be a large crowd here to-day. The first day of circuit court is usually consumed in selecting the two jurors, delivering the charge to the grand jury and other things in the way of getting the wheels of justice in running order, sometimes allowing speakers to be heard, etc., and next day the grind begins.

Advertising Hustling.

V. L. Gates and C. B. Mason are doing some tall hustling in advertising the Pennyroyal Fair. If they keep up the gait they have been going by the end of this week it will be almost impossible to go anywhere in the Pennyroyal district without finding Fair literature of some description. Keep busy gentlemen. The fair is just two weeks off from today, and all roads from every direction must lead to Hopkinsville for five days and nights.

H. B. M. A. MEETING

Friday Night Largely Attended And Much Business Was Transacted.

C. H. BLEICH MADE SECRETARY

$1,500 To Be Raised For Pike Between Pembroke And Trenton.

The meeting of the Hopkinsville Business Men's Association last Friday night was one of the largest and most enthusiastic held for several months. R. E. Cooper, President, presided and Harry Keach was made secretary pro tem.

Messrs. J. M. McReynolds, Thos. L. Metcalfe and Harry Keach were appointed a committee to canvass the city to raise the sum of $1,500 to build two miles of pike between Pembroke and Trenton, in Todd county.

In view of the fact that Clarksville, with the aim of diverting much of the trade along that highway to Clarksville, was a liberal contributor to the fund to complete the pike from Trenton, which has been completed, the Association sees the necessity of doing something towards holding the large trade now enjoyed by Hopkinsville merchants. The committee was directed to proceed at once in raising the amount asked for. The committee got to work early Saturday morning.

Pembroke has already done her share and wants Hopkinsville to do likewise. The committee which appeared before the Association is composed of Messrs. J. F. Mitchell, H. C. Dickinson and F. W. Mims, of Trenton, and Dr. J. L. Barker, of Pembroke, who laid the matter before the meeting.

The office of Secretary of the Association has been vacant since the resignation of R. L. Castleberry last summer. When the question of selecting a new secretary came up several names were suggested, among them that of Mr. C. H. Bleich, of Madisonville, and he was finally chosen for that very important position.

Mr. Bleich is a man of experience, active and in every way fitted for the duties of the office. He is well known here, and is a brother of Mr. George A. Bleich, who built the Princess Theatre. He will leave Madisonville in a short time and come here to assume his duties.

Several matters of minor importance were before the meeting, which were properly disposed of before adjournment.

Sunday night Rev. C. M. Thompson, pastor of the First Baptist church, preached an appropriate sermon to the members of Green River Lodge, No. 54, I. O. O. F., who attended the service in a body. A special musical program was delightfully rendered. The sermon was one of Mr. Thompson's splendid efforts and received the closest attention of visitors and all others who heard it.

VOTE MAY BE TAKEN

Physicians Unanimous For Establishing White Plague Hospital.

CIVIC LEAGUE TAKES A HAND

Joint Meeting at City Court Room at 10 O'clock This Morning.

Dr. Curry and the Christian County Medical Society are positive in their assertion that Christian county's greatest need today is a tuberculosis hospital. The society has watched with much interest the outcome of investigations made by the physicians in their six weeks' campaign for better health and the discovery of the alarming prevalence of the white plague throughout the county impels both to take the first steps in building a hospital.

The Civic League is also deeply interested in the matter and is ready to join forces with the physicians, and a large majority of the people of the county and city, it has been claimed are ready to start the ball rolling.

With this in view a joint meeting has been called for this morning at 10:30. The meeting will be held in the city court room, and not at the Avalon as previously announced. The Teachers' Institute is using the Avalon this week. The meeting of the Medical Society was called by its President, Dr. F. M. Sites. The call for the League to meet with the Society was made by Mrs. F. K. Yost, the President. The main object of the meeting is to arrange for allowing the voters of the county to express themselves at the regular election, on the 4th day of November.

THE AVALON As A Free Place For Meetings Is Appreciated.

Mr. Thos. L. Metcalfe is much pleased with the appreciation the public has shown by the use of The Avalon. He built it for the public to use without cost. Everybody should remember this and when a place is wanted for entertainments, lectures and meetings of different kinds, he would be pleased to have the large room used.

In the past few days the Planters Tobacco Association used it for two meetings, the Daughters of the Confederacy met there, the directors of the Terry Coal Co. used it and last Monday the Christian County Medical Society held their regular monthly meeting as has been their custom for several months, in the large, well lighted and ventilated room. Mr. Metcalfe, as announced in his formal tender of the hall to the people, wants them to consider the Avalon theirs.

The October Woman's Home Companion.

One of the most valuable contributions to the October Woman's Home Companion is an article by Mary Heaton Vorse entitled "The New Freedom For Little Children." It is the first of a series reporting the Montessori principle of education as it may be used by the American mother at home. Dr. Montessori is the famous Italian woman expert on teaching, who asserts that the fundamental principle of education should be liberty. No child, she thinks,
should ever have a task imposed on
it. Discipline comes through liberty.
Her idea is that an individual is not disciplined when he has been rendered silent. He is annihilated—not disciplined. An individual is really disciplined when he has mastered
himself.

Don't Let Baby Suffer With Eczema and Skin Eruptions.

Babies need a perfect skin cover-

only intense suffering, but hinder
their growth. Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment can be relied on for relief
and permanent cure of suffering babies whose skin eruptions have made their life miserable. "Our baby was afflicted with breaking out of the skin all over the face and scalp.
Doctors and skin specialists failed to help. We tried Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment and were overjoyed to see baby completely cured before
one box was used," writes Mrs.

IN LINE WITH CIVILIZATION

Sultan of the Maldives Archipelago Orders Up-to-Date Vessel for Use of Heir to Throne.

Little is ever heard concerning the Maldivian archipelago, which consists of numerous coral islets, about 400 miles west of Ceylon, of which colony of Great Britain they are a dependency, having over them a sultan
who pays allegiance to and receives the protection of the Ceylon government.

The inhabitants number about 30,- 000 and profess the Mahomet religion. Their chief industry is catching and salting fish for the Ceylon market. Coconuts are grown on the islands, and a fair amount of copra
is sent to Ceylon to be exported with Ceylon copra to other countries.

At present the means of communication between Ceylon and the Maldives is only by small sailing boats,
but it has just been announced that the ambassador of the sultan in Colombo has been instructed to advertise in English shipping papers for the purchase of a cargo steamer of 400 to 600 tons capacity.

Passenger accommodation will be provided on the steamer chiefly in order that the sultan's heir and his suite may travel to and from the islands. Electric lighting must also be installed and there must be electric fans in the first-class cabins.

The sultan of the Maldives recently decided that his heir to the sultan-
ate should receive a thorough English education in Ceylon.

NICE NAP

The Deacon—He's fine. He only woke me up once.

SPURGEON'S DISLIKE OF ORGAN.

Spurgeon's famous tabernacle in London is to be closed for redecoration,
but it is still to remain unique among London churches inasmuch as
its people refuse to have an organ,
preferring that the singing should be led by a "precentor," after the old-fashioned Scottish style. This prejudice is a legacy from Mr. Spurgeon himself, who, though able to "smoke
a cigar to the glory of God," did not think that an organist could play his instrument to similar purpose. When speaking on one occasion at a meeting to celebrate the installation of an organ in a brother minister's church
the great preacher listened to an exhibition of the instrument's power,
then remarked, "Yes, it praises its maker very well."

EVIDENTLY HURT HIM.

This incident is reported by the Concordia Kansan: "An elderly man and a young girl were standing on the street last Saturday. The girl was doing the talking and seemed very earnest. The man looked so serious that people passing thought the girl must be telling him something which affected the life of a nation itself. Finally the girl stopped talking and looked at the man with her heart in her eyes. He seemed very thoughtful and was apparently weighing some big question in his mind. At last his hand went slowly into his trousers pocket and he pulled out a quarter and handed it to his daughter."

NATURAL REASON.

"Why did that rich man want to commit suicide?"
"Well, he got to thinking that his income of $10,000 was only a drop in the bucket."
"Well?"
"So he concluded to kick the bucket."

KEEP THE DOOR SHUT.

Footman—There's a poor fellow downstairs, sir, who wants help. He says the wolf is at his door, sir.
Mr. Richleigh—Dear me, that's
bad. Tell him to be careful not to open it.

HOW CHINESE WED

Combination of Occidental and Oriental Customs.

Features of the Ceremony Copied From
the American Form—Men Dress
in Frock Coats and a Scarlet Vell for Bride.

A few days ago it was my good fortune to be a guest at a wedding, the chief participants in which were a young Cantonese man and woman of the more progressive type. The ceremony was not a Christian one, yet
many features were closely copied
from the American form, says a writer
in Friend.

The young bridegroom was at one time a student in the United States,
and is now aide-de-camp to the governor general of the province of Krong-tung. His father was formerly Chinese minister to Cuba, and later a member of the bureau of foreign affairs in Peking. Both parents of the bridegroom speak English and Spanish fluently, in addition to their native
tongue.

When I reached the house at about 2:30 p. m. there was already a large company of guests present. The walls were gayly decked with scarlet fea-
tons and scrolls, on which golden characters described the auspicious
event, and everywhere the word for happiness was displayed in gilt. Fea-tons of orange buds were strung from wall to wall, and each guest wore a gilt medal—souvenir of the occasion
—fastened by a scarlet ribbon to his coat.

The guests were seated on both sides of a central aisle, at the head of which a small table was placed on a raised platform. Before this table and separated from each other by the middle aisle stood bride and bridegroom with their backs to the audience.

The bride wore a scarlet vell which covered her entire person, but one could easily detect the gorgeous wedding dress beneath, made of scarlet silk and elaborately embroidered in thread of genuine gold. The bridegroom was dressed in conventional frock coat and white vest.

Behind the bride and bridegroom
stood the 12 ushers—six men and six women—and the six bridesmaids and six groomsmen—24 in all. The men were all dressed in frock coats, while
the young ladies wore light blue silk dresses of Chinese style, and their hair was tied up in foreign fashion
with light blue ribbon, altogether making a striking contrast to the gorgeous costume of the bride. Many of the girls had very beautiful faces.

One of the most pleasing features of the occasion was the music, which consisted of foreign airs beautifully played on a piano by the sister of the groom. After several pieces had been played the four guests of honor arrived in sedan chairs and every one
arose as they walked up the center
aisle. These gentlemen were the governor general, the secretary of war for the province and the commissioners of foreign affairs and education, the last being a Christian. All were dressed in frock coats.

The governor and secretary of war,
who acted as master of ceremony, sat
at the small table facing the young couple and the audience. At the ends of the table sat the two commissioners.

After a musical prelude, his excellency, the governor, rose from his seat and addressing himself to the young couple, turning first to one and then to the other, spoke of the relations of man and wife, and pronounced them married.

He was followed by the secretary of war, whose short address was read for him by a secretary. The two commissioners, who were designated as the witnesses, then arose and in turn addressed the bride and bridegroom.
Finally all four, together with the bride and groom, signed the marriage certificate and drank from four silver goblets of wine. The ring ceremony was then performed—bride and bridegroom exchanging rings.

A hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," was sung by the bridesmaids,
then the formal greeting between bride
and bridegroom—not a kiss, but bowing three times. Then, turning around and facing the audience, standing side
by side, the young couple bowed to the guests and walked down the aisle
between the guests, bowing as they went. They were followed by two of the bridesmaids. They then returned to their former position. After this a number of short declarations were read and a sort of benediction pronounced. Another hymn was sung and the guests were invited into an adjoining room to partake of some tea.

Old China is being transformed into a new and progressive country. The customs and manners of the Occident
are creeping into the land, but always with Oriental modifications whereby
their foreign features are softened
down.

Tunnel for Honeymooners.

Mr. Flatbush—This paper says that the first tunnel under the Pyrenees,
recently pierced for a Franco-Spanish
railroad, has a total length of about five miles.

Mrs. Flatbush—I know a few girls
who are contemplating honeymoon
trips soon; guess I'll send them that information.

DANGER IN POPULAR SONGS

Baltimore American Calls Attention to the Offensiveness of Some of the Pronounced Hits.

A current magazine asks fathers if
they know the songs their daughters
are singing. Probably they don't.
The music sounds catchy, and in the jumble of words the meaning is not obvious, remarks the Baltimore American. The suggestive song is one of the developments of a day
when there seems to be a general
loosening up in the matter of modesty. Publishers put it out because the public absorbs it. But do the people really want such stuff, or is it that in the lilt of the music the sinister nature of the words is not apparent? And yet young and old sing and shout the smut song in great glee. If the young are innocent, their elders can hardly be ignorant. Their indifference and example may be calamitous. There is more danger to the young from the suggestive songs than from the fashions of the day. Probably nine out of ten girls take no thought of what they idly sing at their piano, but what of the tenth? Many an old-fashioned parent would be shocked to analyze some of the song hits of the day. Chicago is after the smut
song hard, and so ought other cities to be. People should be ashamed to listen to it, publishers to print it and parents to tolerate it.

PERFUMES FROM THE ALPS

Traffic in Sweet Scents Has Grown in Recent Years to Proportions That Are Enormous.

By far the most important commercial undertaking of the maritime Alps is the perfume industry, according to Consul Hunter, at Nice. During 1912 the trade in essential oils,
concretes, enfleuraged greases and
other primary articles of perfumery
amounted, after a period of depression,
to be regaining its former leading
place in the exports from this region.
This is due to the fact that at present
synthetical perfumery is usually
mixed with pure flower products,
which gives it a more highly scented
value, and the demand for high-grade perfumery made of purely floral products is increasing. The amounts of the various flowers used annually by the perfumery factories
at Grasse are stated to be as follows
in pounds: Orange flowers, 4,400,- 000; roses, 3,300,000; jasmine, 2,- 640,000; violets, 800,000; tuberose, 650,000; carnations, 330,000; black
currants, 22,000; mimosa, 176,000;
mignonette, 132,000; jonquils, 119,- 000.

LAWYERS "SPECIALISTS."

Herbert Corey in his New York
letter recently wrote: "So thoroughly
are the various branches of crime organized that before Judge Swann of the criminal courts looks at the calendar he is often able to tell what sort of case is to come before him.
'If I see one lawyer, for example,'
said Judge Swann, 'I know that a shoplifter is on trial. And if there is another lawyer in the court I know that it is a pickpocket. Still another man specializes in burglars. Another attorney always represents the truck thieves. I know the private telephone number the thieves call
when they want aid from the heads of the syndicate.'"

TRULY WONDERFUL INFANT.

Perhaps the most extraordinary infant prodigy on record was Christian Heinicke, born at Lubeck in 1721. At ten months he could speak
and repeat every word spoken to him,
at twelve months he knew by heart a great portion of the Bible, at three years he spoke and read French and Latin as easily as his native tongue.
In his fourth year he employed himself in the study of religion and church history, and his fame as a scholar spread so that the king of Denmark sent for him and was astonished at his learning. Just before he was five, however, Heinicke
fell sick and died.

ONE LIKENESS.

"Did you ever hear of a horse that was as bold as a lion?"
"Well, I've heard of some in one respect like lions."
"What is that?"
"They are roaners."

ASKING TOO MUCH.

"I'm sure to break the automobile."
"We'll repair it free for a year."
"And will you repair the things
I run into?"

Rosy As A Girl.

Summit, N. C.—In a letter received from this place, Mr. J. W. Church,
the notary public, says: "My wife
had been ailing for nearly 12 years,
from female imen's, and at times,
was unable to leave the house. She suffered agony with her side and back. We tried physicians for years, without relief. After these treatments all failed, she took Cardui,
and gained in weight at once. Now
she is red and rosy as a school girl."

Growing in Favor.

The water from the well located on the farm of Luther H. Smithson, near Church Hill, is growing in favor
every day. The most obstinate cases of indigestion, constipation
and stomach trouble are yielding
to the medical qualities of this water by a few days use. Probably half the people who say they have "heart trouble" have nothing
but indigestion, sometimes manifestly in an acute form. Try the water from Mr. Smithson's well for a few days and test its virtues
for yourself. He delivers it your

Pat and the Clock.

One of the inmates of a New York insane asylum, an Irishman, was sent to an adjoining ward to find out the correct time. He returned in a moment and announced:

"Twenty minutes 't' twelve."
"Pat, are you sure that clock is right?" he was asked.

Perfume With the Breeze.

A small but very powerful electric fan just put on the market is a distinct novelty in that it has a concealed vaporizer attached to the motor.

This attachment, placed behind the blades of the fan in such a way that it does not interfere in the slightest with the production of a breeze, is so powerful that any scent placed in it permeates the room almost immediately after the fan is put in motion.

The new device is designed to make a special appeal to the feminine contingent and may be used to advantage in sleeping and living rooms.

Like Retort.

A dapper young shoe clerk fitted a number nine over a farmer's yarn sock. "When you get these on," he smilingly remarked, "you can sing 'How Firm a Foundation.'" The farmer answered not a word until the number nines were on his feet, and his old shoes in a neatly wrapped package under his arm. As he reached the door, he smilingly said, "And you can sing 'A Charge to Keep I Have.'"

Electrify the Pupils.

They are using electricity in primary school education in Stockholm. Just how it is used does not appear, but we are told that the "classroom" is subjected to electricity. ### Dead From a Thorn Throat.

A thorn of her favorite rose puncturing her finger while she stretched forth her hand to pluck it for a friend's bouquet, caused the death of Miss Susan Relchart at Greenport, N. Y. ## HAS DISCOVERED A NEW CARE

One Thing to Be Thankful for, It Is Not Likely to Trouble Very Many of Us.

"There have been times when I thought myself very unhappy," said the man. "I thought I had nearly every grievance under the sun to make me unhappy, but I met a man yesterday who was worrying over something which I am quite positive I shall never worry over."

"He is a naturalist who makes a specialty of butterflies. The cause of his disquietude is the lack of appropriate names for pet butterflies."

"In his opinion the only really fitting name for a butterfly is Joseph. If you have only one butterfly it is simple enough to call him Joseph. But say you have a whole apiary, or whatever you style their domicile, stocked with butterflies of both sexes, the repetition of Joseph is misleading and confusing. Being surrounded by so many Josephs for which he can find no other satisfactory name is a very real anxiety to my friend."

"Think of it," he says, "millions of butterflies in the world and only one appropriate name to call them by! It is very distressing."

"So you see there are always a few cares in the world from which most of us are free."

SUCCEEDS IN WELDING COPPER

A process of welding copper with the oxy-acetylene flame has been developed by a German inventor. He has found it necessary to use larger torches than for iron welding, but in general the process is similar, except that he employs a liquid welding paste and a special copper welding wire. The paste prevents the formation of oxide. The process has been used for welding copper plates up to an inch in thickness. The process is being used in the principal copper works in Germany with great success.

NOW A SEARCHLIGHT BOMB.

An illuminating projectile recently perfected by the Krupp company in Germany is designed to replace searchlights in military operations, as searchlights offer good targets for the enemy and are often destroyed. The projectile contains a number of tubular bodies composed of illuminating substances. ## FELT HE HAD KICK COMING

Village Grocery Man Really Should Find a Way to Keep His Business Interests Separate.

At a recent social session in Mount Holly, Surrogate Joseph Huff, of that place, told of an incident which convincingly demonstrates that some kicks are eminently justified.

In a certain section of Jersey, so ran the story of the surrogate, there is a village grocery store, where, besides salt and prunes, everything may be purchased from a collar for a pet rhinoceros to a sprocket wheel for a pinola. Together with this the grocery store is the local post office.

A few days ago a farmer entered the store with something on his mind, and after taking a fresh chew of tobacco to fortify himself, he leisurely approached the counter.

"Look here, David," he complainingly remarked, addressing the proprietor, "I ain't kickin' none, but hain't there some way that ye kin kind o' sepparate yer grocery bizness an' yer post office bizness so that they won't mix quite so much?"

"There you go complainin' ag'in, Joshua!" responded the grocery man. "What's achin' you this time?"

"No hard feelin's, David," rejoined Uncle Josh, "but Fother day I got some postage stamps here jes' arter Jake Smith got two gallons o' ole, an' every derned one o' them tasted o' kerosene."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

ECLIPSED

"Brown certainly loves his wife. He actually wears the neckties she makes him."

CRAWL STROKE POPULAR.

It is just a decade since the first description of the crawl swimming stroke came to us from Australia and caused our racing men to take up its study, but the ten short years have completely revolutionized the art of natation in this country. A striking illustration of what the crawl has done for us may be found in the comparison of our national records, as they were before its advent, and as they now stand.

It may be added, too, that we have only begun to appreciate the full possibilities of the new stroke. The attitude of many experts toward it, who maintained in the past, and still maintain, that it is too punishing on the muscular system to be used over long courses, has deterred a number of the leading distance swimmers from adopting it. But of late a few bold spirits have tackled tests of endurance with it and done so well that it seems only a question of time before it finds universal favor for all around work.

AVIATION AS A BUSINESS.

Aviation is fast becoming a business of huge proportions, especially in France, where 489 persons hold licenses to fly. It would be more strictly accurate to say "have held," for many of them have taken their last flights.

In 1911 there were built in France 1,350 aeroplanes with a total horsepower of 80,000. In 1912 the number was raised to 1,425, and this year 2,000 have already been built.

Putting the average cost at $3,000 (which would be nearer the lower price than the average) the aeroplanes of 1912 would represent about $4,500,000, besides a vast sum for accessories. For instance, last year about 8,000 propellers were required.

World's Jersey Record.

A new world's milk record for Jersey cows was recorded by Eminent's Bess, owned in Houghton county, Mich. Her yearly record under the supervision of the Michigan Agricultural college shows a production of 18,783 pounds of milk, testing 1,132 pounds, 9 ounces of butter. The former Jersey record, held by Jacoba Irene, was 17,258 pounds of milk. The new record also exceeds the Guernsey breed record held by Spottwood Daisy Pearl by 179 pounds of milk.

NEW YORK REAL ESTATE WORTH $8,010,000,000

Assessment Raises City's Valuation $15,000,000 Over Last Year.

New York, Sept. 19.—The assessed valuation of real estate in New York City this year passes the $8,000,000,000 mark. The exact figures, made public today, are $8,010,000,000. This is an increase over last year of $15,000,000.

The bulk of the increase comes from new hotels and office buildings erected on the West Side, in the neighborhood of Forty-second street. The increased assessment enlarges the city's borrowing capacity of $15,000,000.

Black Sheep.

Mrs. John F. Cuthriell, of Baltimore, has sued Mrs. Helen Norris and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Bertha Norris, of Easton, Md., for $50,000 for alienating the affections of her husband, Rev. Jno. F. Cuthriell. She has endearing letters the women wrote to the minister.

Rev. Jesse Beesley, a Baptist preacher aged 56, has been jailed at St. Louis on a charge of bigamy. He has three wives living and one dead.

Rev. W. E. Pippin, a Baptist minister at Bentonville, Ark., pleaded guilty to passing a worthless check on a member of his congregation, and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary.

The Editor's Friend.

An Iowa wife recently soundly whipped her husband for not paying a newspaper subscription after she had given him the money to pay it with. That good woman ought to be honored by having her praises sung here below, and should have a crown trimmed in order and a harp with an extra string up yonder—Harrodsburg Herald.

THE MOUSE TRAP

Another Proof That All's Well That Ends Well, in the Course of True Love.

Jane Harding had just completed dusting the sitting room and absentmindedly took a book from the table. Seating herself in the chintz-covered chair by the window, she opened the book at random and those words met her gaze: "The man who makes the best mousetrap will find a beaten path to his door even though he live in the midst of a forest." Jane reread the lines again and again, and finally her eyes wandered to the garden, which stretched in colorful beauty beyond the window. She remained immovable for several minutes engaged in deep thought, and then a voice softly called her name. She dropped the book and hastened to answer the summons of her invalid mother. It was many hours before Jane returned to the sitting room, and then she opened the old mahogany desk, in the far corner, and began to add up the bills which had arrived in the morning's mail. Since the death of her father, two years previous, Jane had assumed the responsibilities of the household and had never revealed to her mother that there was comparatively little money remaining in the bank after the funeral expenses had been paid. She sighed as she placed the three figures, representing the doctor's bill, to the column, added it up carefully and then wrote out the checks. When this was completed she gave the little boy next door a bright new penny to post them.

Jane was only twenty-five, unusually pretty and possessed of a naturally buoyant nature that knew no quelling. She passed through the hedge into the garden, her thoughts concentrating themselves on a plan by means of which the family coffers could be refilled. The quotation from Emerson recurred to her and she repeated it softly while gathering a bouquet of spice pinks. "Since I cannot make mousetraps, I shall have to substitute something else. Now what can I do well?"

"Nothing but baking. My pies, cookies and layer cakes are always delicious and sell readily at the church fairs, so from now on I shall supply anyone who cares to buy my wares." These were the thoughts of Jane as she pulled one pink after another until the bed was almost shorn of its fragrant treasure. She buried her face in the cool blossoms and reentered the house to minister to her mother's needs.

The next day Jane wrote notes to her friends informing them that she would fill any orders to furnish pastry for parties, picnics or for general use. She also asked the postmaster to recommend her to the cottagers who came to Hillside during the summer months.

One morning the postmaster, while handing her the mail, said: "Miss Jane, there's an artist living in the Porter bungalow and he will be glad to have you serve him with pies and cakes. He wants bread also, so if you can spare him a loaf now and then he will be glad to buy it. I told him how you couldn't be beaten when it comes to baking, so the next time you make pies or cakes bear him in mind."

"Thank you, Mr. Martin, I shall," smiled Jane as she took the several letters, which proved to be orders.

That afternoon she packed a small basket containing a loaf of bread, a rhubarb pie and some cookies, instructing little Jimmy Case to deliver them at the Porter bungalow.

Two days later Jane, in a blue gingham frock and white apron, with sleeves rolled above her elbows, was rolling out the yellow dough for sugar cookies when a man stood in the doorway and timidly knocked. "Will you come in, please?" said Jane. "My hands are covered with flour and I dare not open the door."

The man responded to her request and entered the kitchen. "I knocked several times at the front door and, getting no response, decided to take a chance on coming to the back. You see, I knew some one was here, for there is no disguising the odor of baking when they are baking."

Jane laughed. "Won't you sit down?" she asked. "No, thank you, I had to come to the post office, and thought I would stop and ask you to supply me with more of the very excellent pies and cakes you so kindly sent a few days ago. I am a sojourner in the Porter bungalow, so please take pity on me and send them soon."

"What would you like to have?" Jane inquired.

"Two loaves of bread, six pies and twice as many cakes as you sent before."

"You are expecting company, then?" Jane inquired. "I shall send them up tomorrow morning."

"No, I never bother with visitors when I want to work; and that reminds me that the light is perfect today and time is fleeting, so if I want to accomplish anything it behooves me to return to the hill."

Jane watched his long, swinging strides as he walked from the yard. So that was the artist, and she hadn't recognized any of the earmarks of his profession. His hair was close-cropped, his face lacked the artistic pallor and the inevitable Windsor tie was missing. He was strong and wholesome looking, and Jane thought him the finest example of the genus homo she had ever seen.

Jimmy Case being away from home for the day, Jane was forced to deliver the basket to the artist. So, attired in a freshly laundered, flowered dimity frock and a broad-brimmed leghorn hat, she walked toward the bungalow. Thus Jane reasoned: "He must have something to eat; artists were always hungry and very poor. Therefore, she would not charge him her regular prices. Too bad that he, also, was ill favored by fortune. If only people would buy his paintings; but they never did appreciate talent until after the death of the artist." By this time she had reached the bungalow crowning the hill, among the grove of poplar trees.

She found the artist so absorbed in his work that he failed to notice her approach. So, tempted by a desire to watch him painting unobserved, she quietly entered the room and stood for some seconds while he plied the brush with strong, quick strokes. Presently he turned. "I felt some one watching me. Do sit down."

Jane sank into a chair and for a minute he gazed at her critically, finally saying: "I wonder if you would allow me to paint you? I need you in my orchard picture."

Jane blushed. "Of course I would. Whenever you like." He thanked her profusely also for bringing the pastry, and then Jane rose to go. Hatless he escorted her to the foot of the hill and ordered more pies, bread and cakes, saying that he would call for them two days later.

Jane was kept extremely busy, with the care of her mother and filling orders, for each time the artist came he wanted more pastry. Jane could not imagine how anyone could possibly have such an enormous appetite. Perhaps he did not have anything else to eat. Poor man! she must make the prices lower than ever.

The artist soon acquired the habit of spending many of his evenings with Jane, and on the day his painting of her was completed he came down and begged the fair subject to return with him to view the results of his handiwork.

Jane stood enraptured before the exquisite picture and finally gasped: "Surely, you can sell this one?"

"Sell it?" he snapped. "Who will I couldn't sell my pictures? I wouldn't part with this one for a kingdom."

"Aren't you foolish, if you need the money?" she inquired.

"What gives you the impression that I need money?"

Jane hesitated, then stammered: "Why—why, all artists are poor, aren't they?"

He laughed heartily. "You dear, dear girl, this is delicious," and coming nearer he took both her hands in his. "Knowing me to be in the depths of poverty, will you share it with me? For I love you beyond all expression, Jane."

She gladly cast her lot with his, only to find out later that he was immensely wealthy.

When searching through the bungalow one day for a lost book, Jane opened a closet door and there found stacks and stacks of stale bread and cakes. Then she knew why he had purchased them. The pies she discovered later on the bank of the creek running at the base of the hill. When she confronted him with tearful accusation of the base deed he said: "It was not because they weren't tempting that I threw them away, but I never eat pastry; besides, they served their purpose, furnishing me with an excuse to see you, dearest."

She sighed. "And I imagined that my baking was the mousetrap that caught you."—Buffalo Express.

Nearly all streets led to the fair grounds last Sunday, especially in the afternoon. Some were afoot, others in autos, surreys, buggies and even on horseback. I seemed to be any way to get there.

There is a great deal of work to be done this week. Fifty new stalls are being built and the lattice fence in front of the grand stand has to be completed before whitewashing begins. Next week, the last before the opening day, will be cleaning up week. There is much to be done, but a force sufficient to have everything in order will be constantly at work. The Public Service Company will complete its work of putting up the wires this week, the posts having already been set. Everything has been arranged and nearly completed for the big event. ## INSISTED ON MAKING TRADE

Collie Dog and Hen Exchanged Offspring and Objected to Interference in the Matter.

A fine Scotch collie owned by C. J. Rodman recently gave birth to seven pups. A Barred Rock hen of the same establishment hatched out a brood of ten "peeps" about the same time, writes a Raven (O.) correspondent of the New York Evening Telegram. The collie, with her pups, were placed in a small kennel near the coop where resided the hen and her brood. On the same day the collie and the Barred Rock decided to swap families. That night Rodman came home and found the collie with the "peeps" and the Barred Rock with the pups. They were both mothering their families and the pups and "peeps" appeared contented with the change.

The next morning Rodman gently placed the collie with her puppies and the hen with her "peeps." During the day Mrs. Rodman was forced to free the hen and collie because of the racket they kicked up.

No sooner were they free than the Barred Rock took possession of the puppies and the collie lined her brood of "peeps" up around her.

When Rodman came home in the evening he saw the lay of things and refused to interfere further. Now the collie has her "peeps" and the hen her puppies.

RETALIATION WITH A POINT

German Florist, Goaded Beyond Bearing, Finally Driven to a Really Neat Comparison.

"Thou are like unto a flower," warbles the German poet to his love. A certain exasperated old German florist and nurseryman who flourished half a century ago in New York was accustomed to assert with equal positiveness that a flower is like a woman.

He had many women customers whose trade he appreciated, but whose demands often drove him to rumple his upstanding Teutonic brush of hair until he looked like an angry parrot. He finally unbosomed himself to the husband of one of them, whose diary has preserved his words:

"I have so much trouble with the ladies when they come in to buy mine rose! They wants him hardy, they wants him double, they wants him muntly, they wants him fragrant, they wants him nice color, they wants him eberrtings in von rose. I hopes I am not what you calls one unneallant man, but I have somedimes to say to that ladies, 'Madam, I never often sees that ladies that was peautiful, that was rich, that was goot-tempered, that was young, that was indeligent, that was disered, that was bervection in one ladies. I see her mooch not!'" —Youth's Companion.

FOREIGNER'S PRAISE.

Capt. Vivian Lockett of the English polo team praised at the Piping Rock club American politeness.

"American men are the politest chaps on earth," he said. "No wonder your suffragettes aren't militant. No wonder your cars are so shamefully overcrowded."

"I don't think a man ever loses anything by being polite while traveling," an American said to me the other day. He was setting off on his vacation as he spoke.

"Well," said I, "there's one thing you're going to lose through your politeness," said I.

"What's that?" said he.

"Your seat to a woman," I replied, "in the very first trolley car you enter."

NAVY GUNNERS RATED HIGHLY

Men Whose Accuracy Can Be Relied On Are Worth Much Money to the Country.

It develops that Captain Plunkett's refusal, which he later revoked, to let the South Dakota's 700 bluejackets fight the forest fires on Mount Tamalpais was based on his unwillingness to risk the lives of "gunners worth $25,000 each."

Estimates of the value of "the men behind the guns" of American battleships have always ranged high, but this is perhaps the first time they have been figured on a cash basis. It is considerably higher than a Lloyd's rating for able-bodied seamen, and ranks the "jackie" gunner well up with successful men in civil life. But even so, it presumably represents a minimum valuation. Worden's gunners on the Monitor were worth more than $25,000, basing their gunfire on the Merrimac. And certainly a gunner who could disable a dreadnought would be worth many times that amount.

But the "$25,000 gunner" is a happy figure of speech, a bit of sentimental mathematics which transcends any attempt at analysis. It shows what the navy thinks of the big-gun marksmen on whose skill and accuracy the fate of the great battleships depend, and it throws a lot of light on the spirit of the service.

BEST HE COULD DO.

Gen. Frederick D. Grant said to his servant one morning: "James, I have left my mess boots out. I want them soled."

"Yes, sir," the servant answered.

The general, dressing for dinner that night, said again: "I suppose, James, that you did as I told you about those boots?"

James laid 35 cents on the bureau.

"Yes, sir," said he, "and this is all I could get for them, though the corporal who bought them said he'd have given half a dollar if pay day hadn't been so far off."

THE THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION OF THE NEW YORK WORLD

Practically a Daily at the Price of a Weekly.

No Other Newspaper in the World Gives So Much at So Low a Price.

This is a time of great events and you will want the news accurately and promptly. The Democrats, for the first time in sixteen years, will have the Presidency and they will also control both branches of Congress. The political news is sure to be of the most absorbing interest.

There is a great war in the Old World, and you may read of the extinction of the vast Turkish Empire in Europe, just as a few years ago you read how Spain lost her last foot of soil in America, after having ruled the empire of half the New World.

The World long since established a record for impartiality, and anybody can afford its Thrice-a-Week edition, which comes every other day in the week, except Sunday. It will be of particular value to you now. The Thrice-a-Week World also abounds in other strong features—serial stories, humor, markets, cartoons; in fact, everything that is to be found in a first class daily.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the Hopkinsville Kentuckian together for one year for $2.65.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $3.00.

HOPE'S DECISION

Young Girl's Choice Between Worthy Suitors Settled as Eros Must Have Wished.

By JEAN DOUGLAS.

John Adams Pembroke was a representative member of one of New England's oldest families, and when his large factory was reduced to ashes, leaving him almost destitute, he decided to take his family west, invest the few thousands remaining in a ranch and retrieve his lost fortune. He had inherited the pride of his ancestors and could not bear to see another family occupying the mansion while his had to live in a small frame house which had been built for the head gardener.

Mrs. Pembroke hastened to Boston, where her son Arthur and daughter Hope were attending school to gently break the awful news to them. She relied upon their filial devotion to make it easier for their father by concealing all disappointment after the first shock was over; therefore she determined to apply the current herself. After relating the painful details, imagine her surprise to find them delighted and enthusiastic over the fact that they were to live on a ranch far removed from cultured civilization! And so, like the Arabs who "folded their tents and silently stole away," the Pembroke family boarded the midnight train for Las Vegas, N. M.

Three years later found them prospering on a cattle ranch fifteen miles west of that flourishing town, and like the majority of easterners who remain beyond the great divide long enough to appreciate the magnificent proportions life assumes when lived beneath cloudless skies, the small state of Rhode Island no longer appealed to them.

Arthur had assumed his share of the responsibilities, displaying unusual abilities for a boy of twenty-one. Mr. Pembroke made him superintendent of the ranch, and he soon won the admiration of cowboys. Under the tutelage of Red Jones, an expert in the art of "broncho busting," he learned to manage the most fractious cow pony that ever pawed the air.

Hope became the idol of the ranch, thriving on the rarified air. She developed into a perfect specimen of lovely, healthy girlhood. The Pembroke ranch became the mecca to which every pilgrim in search of good, wholesome fun came. Every week-end found the house taxed to its fullest capacity in order to accommodate the guests from Las Vegas. Hope was a musician of unusual ability, and the large living room became the scene of many a dance and "song-fest."

Numbered among Hope's admirers was Arnold Stuart, who owned the adjoining ranch. He was an admirable character in every respect, and in addition to this, extremely good looking. Several times each week he rode to the Pembroke's to accompany Hope on her rides over the mesa, sometimes to an extinct volcano ten miles to the west, or to the Indian village, where the Pueblos lived their lazy, aimless life. Hope was the good angel of this little settlement, frequently supplying them with food and medical aid, having enlisted the services of the family physician.

Mr. Pembroke announced at the dining table one evening that Heath Rothwell, the son of his old roommate at Yale, had graduated the previous June, and his father desired to have him visit his friend and experience a taste of ranch life, and that he was leaving Boston the following week for Las Vegas. Mrs. Pembroke and Hope immediately started great preparations for the entertainment of their guest, and when Heath Rothwell had been at the ranch a fortnight he pronounced it "the most enchanting spot on God's footstool." Hope, with her originality and cleverness, completely captured his heart, making him her devoted serf from the moment he beheld her frank, sympathetic face. He was an extremely tactful, entertaining man, who immediately adjusted himself to his environment and slipped into his particular groove in the household without causing a discordant jar.

Everyone admired his friendliness and his ability to entertain, for without apparent effort he could hold the interest of all the assembled guests by relating a story or singing pretty ballads of his own composition. Arnold Stuart, following the general rule, admired Heath, but saw in him a rival of great prowess against whom he stood small chances in the contest for Hope's affections. Arnold never had the opportunity to speak with Hope alone, for their weekly rides were now shared by the Bostonian, so he resorted to a letter. Through this medium he offered his heart, and as fate decreed on the same day Heath begged Hope to wed him. She admired both men, but Eros had not pierced her heart with his shaft, so it was impossible to choose either one for a lifelong companion. Frankly telling them of her inability to decide, she begged that sentiment be forgotten in their delightful friendship and that the old state of affairs might be restored.

One evening the family, Arnold and a few from Las Vegas were enjoying the songs of Heath Rothwell, when there came a timid knock at the door. Arthur opened it to discover a young Pueblo woman, who asked for Hope, whom she implored to bring the "doctor-man" and come to the village, her baby was "seek." Arthur and Arnold immediately left to saddle the horses, while Heath protested that it was an outrage for her to ride that distance through the darkness to satisfy the whim of an Indian. Hope gave him one searching, pitying glance and rushed to her room, soon appearing attired ready for her mission, and explaining to the frightened Pueblo that the doctor was not there, but that she would prescribe for the child, the four mounted and galloped away.

When they finally reached the adobe hut the child was found to be suffering from croup. Hope, assisted by Arnold, administered medicine which relieved the choked-up condition of the throat, making it possible for the little one to breathe with less effort. After four hours of tireless care on the part of Hope and her able assistant, the baby fell asleep, and she knew the danger was past. Instructing the relieved mother how to care for her baby when it awoke, the trio started for the Pembroke ranch. The moon had risen, and the broad, flat mesa, unbroken save for the arroyos, sage and cactus bushes, peacefully slept beneath its soft, white light. Hope glanced at Arnold, who rode silently at her side, and when she recalled his sympathetic tenderness, as he held the Pueblo baby in his arms, striving to relieve its sufferings, she weighed the satisfying westerner and the entertaining easterner in the balance, and found the latter sadly wanting. Reaching over, she slipped her hand within his. He turned quickly and knew that he had won her. "I love you," whispered Hope. —New York Press.

STOVES IN PARKS.

For the benefit of Los Angeles picnickers the park authorities are placing different devices in the parks which make hot lunches possible. A cement stove with a grill on which meat may be broiled, coffee prepared, bread toasted or a dozen other different things heated without any danger of setting fire to dry grass, has been built. In one of the parks a sink and drain board for washing dishes has been constructed, also of cement, which serves excellently people who have to carry their lunch baskets home on the street cars.

The cement stove also aids the park caretakers, for bits of paper can be destroyed or piled up for kindling fires for the next lot of picnickers who come along.

WHAT WOMAN HAS LOST.

The college woman has succeeded nobly in her endeavors. No one questions this fact. Every profession has opened its doors to college women. The temples of art and science have admitted her within their sacred portals. Every department of the business world finds her occupying positions of honor and trust acceptably. Without doubt she is a success, and yet society seems to owe her a grudge. The emancipated women has gained much, but lost more. She oftentimes has cultivated her intellect at the expense of womanly charm, or, as some one expressed it: "Woman has become an intelligence, but ceased to be a delight." —Suburban Life.

MEAN TRICK.

"When I asked her to marry me she said no, a thousand times no."
"Well?"
"Naturally, I thought I would be safe in asking her 999 times."
"And then?"
"She accepted me when I asked her twice."

Faith.

Dismissing the lamentable fact that, according to the last census, half the American people never go to church, Canon Hughes Scott recently said:

"The trouble is, perhaps, that Americans have a wrong idea about the church. They think the church wants them to believe a lot of outworn dogma. That is not true.

"Yes, the trouble is that the people define faith as the little girl defined it in school.

"Faith, the little girl said, 'is believing what you know isn't true.'"

Who Was on the Train?

"Any gentleman on the train got a corker?" shouted the man in his shirt-sleeves, walking through the car aisle.

"Here! Here!" came from several men with broad-brimmed hats, as they reached for their hip pockets.

"Thanks, awfully," said the countless man, accepting one of the proffered instruments. "I'll return it in a few minutes. A gentleman in the forward car wants to open a bottle of milk."

Different Ending.

"Had quite an adventure lately. Gave an old gentleman my seat in a street car and he insisted on taking my card."

"And now he wants to give you $25,000, eh?"

"No; now he wants to sell me an encyclopedia on dollar payments."

REAL REASON.

A Pampered Pet.
Dame Fortune on her smiled
Throughout a lengthy life.
She was an only child;
Also an only wife.

End of the Concert.
"I heard 'The Last Rose of Summer' on Plumly's phonograph."
"Well, did you enjoy it?"
"Yes, indeed. He'd already played all his other records for me and this was the last one he had."

Another Complication.
"Horse racing has always been complex. You have to allow for weather wind, condition of the horse, and condition of the track."

"And now you have to look out for interference by suffragists."

Greater Trust.
"Your nursemaid seems to be very careful with your child."
"She does seem to be careful. If she continues to be reliable, I believe I shall trust her with Fido."

Regretting.
"You'll be sorry some day that you didn't marry."
"Well, I'd rather not be married and be sorry I wasn't than be married and sorry I was."

At the Picnic.
"There are ants in the currant jelly."
"Black ants or red ants?"
"Red ants."
"Good. They won't be noticed as much."

SAFE.
The Tardy One—Now, if I go to school I'll get licked, and if I play hockey I'll get it at home! Guess I'll stay out here and freeze to death.

Always Something.
The men who used to watch the clock. No better than they were. Now gather hourly in a flock At the thermometer.

Contradictory Evidence.
"Mercury was the first messenger boy."
"No, he wasn't. Mercury had wings on his feet."

Tree Lore.
"How can you tell the dogwood?"
"You ought to be able to tell by its bark."

Our Foolish Contemporaries.
Willie, aged twelve, was teasing his busy mother. When she gave him a sharp rebuke he said contritely: "Oh,
mother, you mustn't mind my little contemporaries."
"What's that?" asked his mother in surprise.
"You mustn't mind my little contemporaries," he repeated.
"Do you know what the means?"
queried his mother.
"Why, yes, mother; contemporaries
are little jokes like Life publishes in the back of the paper every week"—
Life.

Modern Way.
"Sakes alive!" ejaculated the Stork
upon meeting the little God of Love
crying bitterly. "What is the matter, Dan?"
"The m-m-m-matter," sobbed Cupid,
"is that Cupidity is making twice as many matches as I am! Uh-wahl hah! ha-a-a-h!"—Judge.

Political Economy.
"What's the wrangle about in Plunk-
ville?"
"Some of the community want to maintain mudholes and swell their private fortunes by hauling automobiles out. Others want to improve the highways, pinch 'em for speeding, and apply the proceeds to public works of all kinds."

POOR MAN.
Henneck—Oh! I'm acclimated to wedded life now.
Henderson—What do you mean?
Henneck—Why, I've been married
so long that I don't mind it any more.

Oh, Joy!
The corn is waving in the field.
The beans denote a handsome yield.
All nature smiles, and it's a "pipie"
That succotash will soon be ripe.

Sad Effect of Imagination.
"How's your husband, Mandy?"
"He's polly, miss, very polly. He ain't able to do nuffin' at all."
"What the trouble?"
"Why jes' a few weeks ago I axed
him if he couldn't carry your washin'
to your home, ma'am, and de idee give him such a stitch in de side dat he jest 'bout sick all de time."

His Favorite Flour.
McMasters was walking with a beautiful girl in a wild New England wood.
"What is your favorite flower, Mr. Mc-Masters?" the girl asked softly.
McMasters thought a moment, then he cleared his throat and answered:
"Well, I believe I like the whole wheat
best."—Washington Star.

Caught On.
"I started out with the 'Hearth and Inglebrook,' a magazine for the home."
"But you dropped that?"
"Yes, nobody had any homes in my section. So now I publish the 'Fire-less Cooker,' a magazine for the flat."

His Luck.
"Uncle Sam ought to be a very lucky man."
"Why, particularly?"
"Because his ships are always coming in."

TOO VALUABLE.
The Easterner—Strange that you
never drink water.
Westerner—Say, from the part of the west where I come from water is too much needed for irrigation to be wasted.

Still, It's a Good Motto.
The Golden Rule does very well
When hung upon the wall,
But oftentimes, the truth to tell,
It doesn't work at all.

Naturally So.
"What makes your husband taste
everything he sees lying around?"
"A consuming curiosity."

Paradoxical.
"Is your dog a fighter?"
"No, and yet he is anxious to lick
any man that comes along."

Not A Day In Bed.
Gramling, S. C.—In a letter from Grambling, Mrs. Lula Walden says:
"I was so weak before I began taking Cardui, that it tired me to walk
just a little. Since taking it I do all the housework for my family of nine,
and have not been in bed a day.
Cardui is the greatest remedy for women on earth." Weak women need Cardui. It is the ideal women's tonic, because it is especially adapted for women's needs. It relieves backache, headache, dragging
feelings, and other female misery.
Try Cardui. A few doses will show you what it can do for you. It may be just what you want.

Sold at Fair Grounds Last Thursday.

It was a fine lot of Berkshire hogs sold at auction last Saturday by Mr. M. W. Blair, of Guthrie. The sale was held at the fair grounds and most of the hogs sold were seen by the crowds that visited the grounds Sunday. Notwithstanding Saturday was a bleak, windy day and too cold to be out doors without business demanded it, the attendance was good and composed almost exclusively of men interested in hog raising. The highest sale made was $41 for a sow and six pigs. Fifty-four hogs and six pigs were sold, the sales aggregating $556. C. R. Maddox held No. 62 and got the registered pig that was given away.

During his residence here Mr. Nasmith has made a host of friends, who will sincerely regret his departure. H. R. Gore, of Washington City, will succeed Mr. Nasmith here. Mr. Gore has been assistant Auditor of the Washington Railway, Light and Power Company.

Fair Weather Promised.

Washington, Sept. 21.—Fair weather generally for the entire country is promised by the weather bureau for the coming week. Frosts will be heavy over the northern territory the first half of the week, but there are no indications of decided changes for the second half.

Sales Here Went Beyond The 10,000,000 Predicted.

As a tobacco market Hopkinsville took her place in the front line this year. H. H. Abernathy, the inspector, comes out with the statement, and has the records to sustain it, that during this season there were sold on the Hopkinsville loose floor market 10,293,315 pounds.

Quoting the opinion of a man connected with the loose floor market this paper, more than a month since, said that the sales would approximate 10,000,000. We are glad to see the figures raised by over a million pounds.

The hoghead sales reached 2,494 hogheads.

With about an 80 per cent. crop in Christian and better crops in other tributary counties it is safe to say that the approaching season will be even better than the past.

GO TO CONFERENCE

Wilson, of Baltimore, will preside over the body while it is in session.

Wives Of Great Men.

Bill Jones' wife takes in washin' and Jim Smith's wife teaches school. Hed Brown's wife takes in sewing, and supports him as a rule.

Hank Frisby's wife paints china, and makes much coin that way.

Lem Bink's wife teaches music, has a big class, so they say.

Their husbands? Goodness gracious! 'Taint no use to talk of them.

They sit around the grocery, Bill and Hed and Hank and Lem.

They settle all the problems of the world as they arise.

The cracker bar'l statesmen don't do nothin' but look wise.

Wives of these men all remind us, we can make our lives sublime.

If we keep our wives a-workin' to support us all the time

Bandits Murder Clerks.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 19.—Two jewelry clerks were instantly killed and Paul Townsend, was probably fatally wounded early last night when they resisted two masked bandits who attempted to rob the jewelry store of J. J. Thompson. The bandits escaped.

The clerks were placing the jewels and watches in their cases for the night when the men, masked, entered and demanded that Townsend, the watch repairer, throw up his hands. Townsend refused, tried to grapple with the men, and was shot down. A bullet penetrated his neck. He believes that the other employee then rushed to his aid and were killed.

Mr. C. F. Wood who was formerly president of the Wood, Stubbs & Co., Seedmen, Louisville, has sold his interest in that corporation and is now President of the Kentucky Paint Mfg. Co. whose advertisement appears in this issue of the Kentuckian. The Kentucky Paint Mfg. Co. is selling paints direct to consumers and is offering specially low prices on the very highest quality paints, freight paid to any railroad station. Advertisement.

Blew Up His Family.

Mack Hunter, aged 34, was blown up his house with dynamite, killing his wife and one daughter. Two other daughters are injured.

Ambitious young men and women should read the advertisement of the Lexington and successful William R. Smith Business College, Lexington, Ky. It educates and helps to success.—Advertisement.

Peculiar Bugs Have Devoured Mustard Crop Which Was the Basis of a Wheat Grower.

A valuable beetle has been discovered by a farmer, who owns a wheat farm near Lowden, Wash. These insects, which are black and beetle-like, may mean thousands of dollars to farmers of this valley and hundreds of thousands to those of the nation. They are half an inch long and half as wide, and have taken possession of the farm by millions, and are killing all the mustard crop on the place. A month ago, when a trip was made over the ranch, it was so covered with the mustard that it was decided to cut the grain for hay. The mustard is now dead and dying and the wheat flourishing. The bugs eat the seed and leaves of the plant, leaving only the stalk, and it is not able to propagate itself. No one seems to know the name of the insect or anything about it. Even those around Lowden had never heard of it before. The foreman has orders to collect some of the bugs, and an effort will be made to determine the species, and whether they can be propagated. Green bugs a year ago saved some of Mr. Kraft's wheat in Franklin county in a similar fashion.

THERE TO SAFEGUARD MORALS

Women Policemen on Eastern Beaches Like to Find Plenty of Work Ready at Hand.

The very conservative little city of Newport has placed women policemen on its beach, remarks the New York Mail. They are supposed to look out for the safety of women and children and incidentally, no doubt, to supervise the moral interests of the beach. If the authority which they may exercise is regarded as a success, after a trial, we may yet see woman policemen all along the beaches. They would certainly find plenty of work to do if they should attempt to bring Coney island up to the conventional standard of conduct which prevails at that sanctuary of riparian proprieties—Bailey's beach at Newport. After they have reformed public manners and abolished "spooning" at the beaches, no doubt we shall see the woman policemen on duty in the public parks. When they have reformed the parks the only refuge of the spoons will doubtless be the Coney island boats, which, being run on navigable waters, are under the authority of the United States government. It takes so long time to get anything done by the government that the manipulations of endearment common on these boats are probably safeguarded for a number of years.

NEW EDIBLE BEAN.

A new variety of bean adapted for dry climates was discovered under interesting circumstances by Prof. R. W. Clothier of the University of Arizona, as reported by him in a recent magazine article. During a 1,300-mile wagon journey over the deserts and mountains of Arizona in the summer of 1908 he visited the Papago Indians and obtained from them several hundred brownish-yellow beans of an unknown variety. These were grown on experimental plots at the Arizona experimental station for four years before the discovery was announced. It appears that the new bean, which has been named "tequary," is more prolific under dry conditions than any other known variety, yielding as high as 730 pounds to the acre, with no water other than the scanty rainfall of Arizona. Under the same conditions ordinary beans yield only from 66 to 144 pounds to the acre.—Scientific American.

HIS EXPERIENCE.

"On the whole," said the aged weather prophet, "I have found that the safest course is to predict bad weather."

"How so?" asked the neophyte. "Because people are much more ready to forgive you if the prediction does not come true."—Puck.

REALLY QUITE SIMPLE.

"How does it happen, Pilkins, that I catch you coming out of a saloon?" "Just this way, Towells: You were passing the door when I stepped out."

NICE DISTINCTION.

Lawyer—Do you mean to tell me the plaintiff was drunk?

Witness—Well, no; but you couldn't call him ostentatiously sober.—Judge.

Memory Training for Witnesses.
It has been suggested that it would be a good plan for courts to enforce a loss of memory cure upon a large number of the witnesses who make their appearance in some of the big cases. Perhaps the correspondence schools would make a reduction for job lots and cut down on the fee.

A Grim Reminder.
"Doctor," said the desperate heavy-weight, "give me something to make me weigh less." "That sort of thing merely makes you dangerously ill." "I don't care if it does." "Very well. But I can't see why you should go to all that trouble merely to make labor a little lighter for your pallbearers."

Knew What She Wanted.
Frances had been studying the Wagner motif with her mother, and her powers of appreciation exceeded her powers of expression. One day she placed the Wagner book in position and implored mamma: "Dearest, let's go to the piano and have the rum-bles."
